Both Houses Effectually Dispose the Bill Establishing a Territorial Board of Examiners.

Council After Doing Considerable Busi ness During the Day Hold an Even-

Both houses made up for time lost Monday by working with a will yesterday and as a result transacted considerable important business. The house effectually killed the bill providing for a board of equalization. The house substitute for council No. 1 to establish a territorial board of examiners for steam boilers was whole and recommended for passage. The bill provides for a boiler inspector at a salary of $2,400 a year and an assistant at $1,800 a year. The office is not only selfsustaining but will bring in considerable revenue. Numerous petitions were presented in both houses protesting against the Northern Pacific or any other corporation being granted odd sections of mineral

The bill relating to county surveyors and the bill fixing the fees of certain county officials were passed by the council. The military bill was ordered engrossed and the bill relating to dower rights of insane women was placed in the hands of a special committee to remodel. The council held an evening session and cleaned up the docket so effectually that they will find very little to do this morning.

All the members were on hand for the fifty-first day's session. "After the usual routine a deluge of petitions was presented against granting the Northern Pacific or any other corporation the mineral lands on odd sections in Montana, and were as follows: By Middleton, from forty-three citizens of Miles City. By Kennedy, from 204 citizens of Jefferson county. By Bickford, from sixty-two citizens of Missoula county. By Mr. President, from 110 citizens of Lewis and Clarke county. By Wm. M. ty-four citizens of Park county. The petitions were referred to the committee on mines and minerals.

Thompson, of Deer Lodge, from the engrossing committee reported the surveyors bill and the fee and salary bill correctly engrossed. They were then passed to the third reading.

Brown, of the judiciary committee, reported back house bill No. 1, relating to the levy of taxes and assessments, without recommendation. It was passed to general orders. Also house bill No. 39, relating to the Montana law library, with amendments, requiring that the board having in charge the affairs of the library shall make out a statement of the books purchased, amount paid and general itemized statement of library affairs, to the next legislative assembly; also that a salary of $1,080 shall be appropriated annually for the librarian and that it do pass. Thompson, or Silver Bow, from the ways and means committee, reported favorably on council tolar.

Also house bill No. 27, relating to county treasurers, recommending that it do not pass. Also council bill No. 44, to prohibit gambling, without recommendation. Placed on general ordess.

Thompson, of the committee to whom was referred house concurrent resolution No. 11, limiting the time of introducing bill to March 6, reported that it be made a special order for March 14 at midnight. On motion of Hatch the report was unanimously adopted.

Council then took a recess until 2 p. m.

When the council resumed the afternoon session several messages were read from the house after the usual preliminaries. On motion of Thompson, of Deer Lodge, the regular order of business was suspended and the council went into committee of the whole. Further consideration of the military bill was resumed. The only important change being the striking out the clause remanding offending soldiers to the county jail as punishment. The committee recommended its passage as amended.

Cole said the bill as it stands would not be proper to pass, and he would vote against it. He favored a bill of the kind, and for this reason moved that it be referred to a special committee.

Thompson, of Silver Bow, thought the object in making the motion was to kill the bill. He said such a law is necessary. He wished the gentleman (Cole) would state his motives for his action.

Middleton said the bill needed some very careful consideration. He didn't believe in giving a husband so much control over his wife's property as this bill provided. As it is, it is a dangerous bill.

Brown thought the bill left a big loophole for some dangerous transactions, and it must be carefully considered. He realized that the bill was drawn to suit a peculiar case in Butte. He had understood that the whole of the property involved in this case belonged to the wife and the bill sought to do away with her dower right. He favored every precaution that would prevent fraud—to an insane or any other woman. It is a dangerous bill, able Butte lawyers to the contrary not with standing.

Thompson, of Silver Bow, moved to amend by stating a particular time when the committee should report.

Cole called the attention of the gentleman from Silver Bow to the fact that he said he favored such a bill, but he would do all in his power to kill the present bill do all in his power to kill the present bill as it is drawn.

Thompson, of Silver Bow, said it was not his desire to accuse the gentleman of anything wrong; he wanted him to state his motives which he had done and he (Thompson) was now satisfied. He said he had a right to the floor and say what he pleased in behalf of his constituents.

Cole then said the committee would return the bill as soon as possible. Thompson's amendment to the motion did not get a second and Cole's motion to refer, was adopted.

Council bill No. 23, for an act regulating corporations was taken up. This is the bill introduced by Thompson, off liver Bow. Sections 1, 2 and 3 were soon passed over, but when section 4 was reached it brought out the fact that corporations and monopolies had a strong following in the republican members. The section gives a minority stockholder a chance to demand an investigation into the affairs of the corporation; and in a court of equity if a stockholder can prove that the company's property is not worth within 15 per cent of its capitalization, the corporation shall be dissolved.

Thompson, of Deer Lodge, moved to strike out the son the committee would return the bill as solved.

Thompson, of Deer Lodge, moved to strike out the section, saying it was an outrage.

Brown said he had not thought much of the measure, but thanks to the keen perception of the gentleman from Deer Lodge he had just discovered where such a bill as this was going to ruin the mining industry of Montana. He would never vote fof the bill with section 4 in it. He then said there were two kinds of mining, "boorasco and bonanza," and went on to explain the difference. He was surprised that the gentleman from Silver Bow, who was largely interested in mining, should indorse such a section.

Thompson, of Silver Bow, in explaining his position, said the object of the bill was to prevent fraudulent mining schemes—it was to prevent the stocking of a mine 585 per cent. above its value, and prevent the people of Montana from being swindled.

Brown—Can you name any fraudulent mining scheme in Montana?

Thompson thought the gentleman's question was one for speculation—what he might consider a fraud Brown might think it legitimate, and vice versa.

Brown thought the law would drive people to Utah, Idaho or St. Louis, Mo., and there form corporations or some other place and would keep capital away from the territory. The motion to strike out section 2 was then adopted. When the question occurred on committee's recommendation to the council, Thompson, of Deer Lodge, moved to amend the motion to recommend its passage by recommending that the bill be further amended by striking all out after the enactment clause.

Thompson, of Silver Bow, of course, opposed it, and Middleton thought through courtesy the bill should be allowed to go to its final passage.

Thompson withdrawing his amendment, so it stood.

Brown then reiterated that the bill was a pernicious one.

Kennedy said he thought the bill a good one and would support it. Corporations were creatures of the law, granted certain rights and privileges not accorded to the private citizens, and it was the duty of the state to protect the rights of the smallest stockholders in the corporation. If other states choose to permit corporations to do as they pleased in such matters, that is no reason why Montana should follow in their unworthy footsteps. He feared no ill effects on the development of the country through corporations not organizing in the territory. Were all the corporations in existence swept from the face of the earth, the development of Montana's mines and farms would go on. The wealth was here and would be utilized whether corporations exwould go on. The wealth was here and would be utilized whether corporations existed or not. But were corporations to organize in other states and territories and attempt to operate in this territorie, the legislature of the territory would have the right to protect the interests of the people of Montans so far as they invested in these corporations. In regard to the excessive capitalization of mines, he thought there was a good deal of humbug in it. The large amount of stock issued on a hole in the ground was not particularly for the purpose of development, but to hoodwink the thoughtless into the idea that it was a good investment to buy stock having a par value of one dollar for five cents a share. The investment would be just as profitable and just as useful on a capitalization of one hundred thousand dollars as of a million, but the operators could not humbug the people so easily. He believed it the duty of the state to hold all corporations to a strict accountability.

House bill No. 35, relating to the printing and posting of city ordinances was next considered.

Thompson, of Deer Lodge, moved the adoption of section 1. It was evident that this bill was for the especial benefit of Anaconda where they propose to post the ordinances passed by the council, not caring to support their paper.

Brown thought it was with but little grace that Anaconda, with a population of 7,000 people, the finest hotel in the northwest and the greatest smelting and reduction plant in the world, should come here and ask that the combined legislative brains and talent of Montana should be used to keep a poor newspaper from making a few dollars. The newspapers hit us once in a while, it is true, but we should reward them for it.

Thompson, of Deer Lodge, said the taxes derived in the city were less than any town in Montana. The great smelters were outside the city limits and no revenue was derived from that source. The item of printing ordinances when left to a paper that has no opposition and fixes its own price is something more than the town could afford.

Collins said no other town was kicking ou side of Anaconda. In Great Falls the important ordinances had been printed and he ventured the assertion that the expense would not exceed $75 up to date. He thought the Anaconda city council display a wonderful lack of business capacity in this matter.

Kennedy said the newspaper was the best medium of circulating knowledge and he thought all laws should be printed. They don't appear in book form for months after they are printed, and the people are kept in ignorance of their existence. He said that two years ago when the INDEPRIDENT published the laws that paper was in great demand all over the territory. The laws were in use through this means many months before the compiled statutes were printed.

Middleton said it was peculiar that newspaper publishers agreed with such unanimity on any bill that required the publication of a notice. He thought the bill under consideration should pass.

Kennedy arose, and looking over at Middleton, said the unanimity of the newspaper men on this matter was only exceeded by the unanimity of the members of the bar association on the matter of the codifical task to perform the dual services required of inspecting probably 800 or 900 boilers and examining and granting licencetion of the laws at a great expense and examining and granting licenses for 500 to 1,000 engineers.

The stockgrowing and agricultural committee reported house bill No. 46, to suppress and prevent the dissemination of contagious diseases among sheep, with a substitute. Placed on general orders.

The report of the chairman of the committee of the whole was received and disposed of as follows:

House bill No. 17, to create a territorial board of equalization, was indefinitely postponed; house bill No. 33, to prevent swine from running at large, referred to the engrossing committee; house bill No. 44, to prohibit lotteries, with amendments of the education and labor committee of the whole, referred to the engrossing committee. Murray introduced house joint resolution No. 12 for the relief of James Sullivan to reimburse him for moneys paid out in securing clerk hire on account of the squirrel bounty law of 1887. It provides for an appropriation of $750.

House bill No. 35, to change the boundary line between Madison and Gallatin counties, was put on final passage.

Mantle said he had received several communications from residents of Madison county in regard to the bill, and while he was in sympathy with the bill he did not believe in opening up these questions at this time. To do so would result in the legislature being swamped with propositions of a similar nature. The bill was lost by the following vote:

The joint enrollment committee reported as ready for the speaker's signature house joint resolution No. 10, regarding telegraphic expenses, and house bill No. 31, relating to signs on gambling houses.

Davis arose and said he wished to offer an apology. In the discussion of the Biedler relief resolution on Monday, he had referred to a certain element known as Missourians. He had a great many friends among them and his remarks were in the nature of a joke and not made with the view to wound the feelings of anyone.

Biakeley said the apology was accepted in the same spirit in which it was offered. The members applauded and peace spread her wings over the scene.

On reassembling Flowers was on motion excused for the day.

Moore was allowed to introduce house bill No. 67, to prevent the sale of certain noxious drugs. Read twice and ordered printed.

The house went into committee of the whole to consider the substitute for council bill No. 1, to establish a territorial board of inspectors of steam bollers.

Murray moved to amend the salary of the inspector at $2,000 per year instead of $200 per month.

Mantle stated that the substitute provided for only two inspectors; that the duties were enlarged and that one of the objections to the original bill was that the salaries were too small.

Saxton thought that a man of the requisite ability should be paid a good salary.

Murray's motion was lost and the section was adopted, fixing the compenstion of the inspector at $200 per month.

Haskell moved to strike out section 3, providing for an assistant inspector at a salary of $150 per month.

Haskell moved to the substitute can provide one. Mantle said it was the opinion of members that the measure would be self-supporting.
